Deafblind people and families' experiences of direct payments and personalisation

Simon Shaw

Direct payments project co-ordinator

About Sense

- Sense is a national charity that supports and campaigns for children and adults who are deafblind.
- Our vision is of a world in which all deafblind children and adults can be full and active members of society.

Deafblindness

- Persons are regarded as deafblind if their combined sight and hearing impairment cause difficulties with communication, access to information and mobility.
- Estimated 242,000 deafblind people in UK.

Sense's direct payments project (May 2007 – April 2010)

Aim:

To fill the gap in information and advice available to deafblind people and families about direct payments

Outcomes:

- Consultation report
- Advice service
- Factsheets on direct payments and purchasing own support
- Training for local direct payments support services
- BSL DVD (Spring 2010)

Challenges when using direct payments/ personal budgets

sense
for deafblind people

- Accessible information and advocacy
- Real choice about how to meet assessed needs
- Amount of direct payment/personal budget
- Recruitment, staff absence and training
- Extra responsibility and paperwork
- Managing direct payments

Amount of direct payments: individuals' experiences

- 'I was given only £6/hr to employ a carer for an epileptic deafblind child. When I said that wasn't enough, the manager said to reduce the number of carer hours if I wanted to pay more.'
- '[The local authority] were reluctant to pay the "going rate" but have agreed that £25.00 an hour is the sort of rate they would have to pay someone if they got someone in themselves for a communicator-guide BSL user.'

Amount of direct payments

- Local authorities award varying rates of direct payments to pay for support
- There should be no maximum amount
- Local authorities have a duty to meet needs under The Deafblind Guidance
- The cost of support for deafblind people must be taken into account

Resource allocation for personal/individual budgets

If councils decide to use a RAS, they should ensure these areas are assessed:

- Communication support
- Access to information
- Mobility
- Need for specialist assessment
- Changing needs

What kind of services do deafblind people and families buy?

sense
for deafblind people

- Communicator guides
- Interpreters
- Intervenors
- Other support workers
- Everyday tasks
- Leisure activities and social activities
- Holidays
- Equipment

What can help individuals and families find appropriate services?

sense
for deafblind people

- Receiving an appropriate rate
- Recruiting locally
- Employing people that are already known to individuals and know appropriate communication skills
- Employing 'family members' who live in the same house

Managing direct payments

- Management might include regular paperwork, recruitment, employer responsibilities
 - ‘The administration is demanding and financial returns are difficult.’
 - ‘After 1 year...social services...finally explained how we should have been dealing with the direct payment.’

An example of good practice in direct payments support services

- A deafblind person who uses Braille and deafblind manual uses the local DP support service
- Sends emails with hours worked
- Support service send payslips with two staples in the envelope and Braille names on each payslip
- Confidentiality and control maintained
- Deafblind person takes on the responsibilities he wants to and receives appropriate support for the rest

Self-assessment and brokerage

Self-assessment:

- Individuals' knowledge of entitlements and services
- Specialist assessments
- Ability to challenge

Brokerage:

- Resourcing to support people effectively
- Specialist knowledge and information
